

LAWYER DYING IN STREET, DOCTOR REFUSES RELIEF

Pedestrians Also Ignore Piteable Plight of Emmett Robinson Olcott.

POLICE IGNORE CASE.

Victim of Heart Disease Dead Half an Hour When Ambulance Arrives.

Facts gathered by Evening World reporters to-day show that Emmett Robinson Olcott, the lawyer, who died last night on the sidewalk in West One Hundred and Eleventh street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues, only five doors away from his home, met a most pitiful end.

For half an hour before his heart ceased to perform its functions he hung to a fire hydrant in front of No. 118 West Eleventh street in a pouring rain, while hurrying pedestrians passed him with careless glances, believing that he was intoxicated.

After he fell unconscious to the sidewalk it was an hour and fifteen minutes before medical attention was secured. A doctor living in the neighborhood was awakened by at least two men to go to the relief of the dying stranger. He refused, saying it was a case for the police.

As for the police—there might as well have been no Police Department in this case. Not for an hour did a policeman show up, and he was summoned by telephone from the Charles street station. Another way of fifteen minutes ensued before an ambulance appeared, but this was because the policeman had to go some distance to send an ambulance call.

Aided by Neighbors. Mr. Olcott, who was sixty-two years old and had been suffering from heart disease and neuritis for some time, went out to make a call in the late afternoon. On the way to his home, at No. 118 West Eleventh street, he became faint in front of No. 118, which is a boarding-house conducted by Mrs. Southwick.

He stopped and grasped hold of a fire hydrant, and there he stood, supporting himself in dying desperation for fully half an hour. Finally he fell in a heap to the sidewalk.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Dennis, boarders at No. 118, had been walking up and down the wide veranda after dinner. They had noticed the old man standing clinging to the fire hydrant, but, undoubtedly, like many who passed him, thought he was unable to navigate.

When they saw him fall they ran to him. Assisted by Mrs. Southwick and Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, of No. 120, they carried him to the veranda steps and placed him in a sitting posture. He was breathing painfully and was evidently in the throes of death. It was quite apparent then that he had not been drinking.

Mr. Hoffman and Mr. Dennis started for a doctor. The nearest physician was out. Another was found, standing at the door of his house in plain sight of the little group around the unconscious man. This doctor refused to take a step.

Mr. Dennis then ran down to Jefferson Market Court and appealed to several policemen on duty to come to Eleventh street and do something for the dying man. The policemen refused, saying it was a case for the man on the beat.

Dead an Hour. An hour had elapsed and the neighborhood had been thoroughly searched for a policeman when some one thought of calling up Police Headquarters. In this way a message was got to the Charles street station.

When the ambulance surgeon arrived he said that Mr. Olcott had been dead half an hour or more. He took the body to the station-house, where the identity of the dead man was established through cards and letters found in his pockets.

Mr. Olcott was born in this city, and was attending the College of the City of New York when the civil war broke out. He enlisted in the navy, and soon won a commission as a lieutenant. He was assigned to the frigate Minnesota, on which he served during the battle of Hampton Roads.

At the close of the war Mr. Olcott returned to New York and entered the law office of Osmond Brothers. Here he became interested in international law, and after a few years he went abroad to study the subject at the University of Berlin. At the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war he was engaged as a correspondent by The New York Tribune, and served in this capacity during the war. At its close he came back to New York and formed the firm of Olcott, Mestre & Gonzalez. He made a specialty of international law, and particularly of the relations between the South American republics, and numbered among his clients important interests in that country. He drew the Cuban railway laws in force during the American protectorate, and was for many years counsel of the New York State Controller. He spoke five languages fluently.

In 1877 Mr. Olcott married Miss Mary G. Clapp, of Boston. They have three children—Herman P. Olcott, a lawyer; Emmett Olcott, who is in a hotel business; and Mrs. Lucy M. Perkins.

DIED OF JOY WHEN RECONCILED TO FAMILY.

Had Been Estranged from Parents, but Had Been Invited to Return to Them.

Joy killed Charles Luder to-day at the home of his foster sister, Mrs. Joseph Miller, No. 64 High street, Corona, L. I. Luder was a law clerk. He was the son of John Luder, a hotel keeper, of No. 60 North avenue, Manhattan. For some time he had been estranged from the members of his family, but a New Year's call bridged the breach. He remained in New York with his father and mother until yesterday, when he went to Corona to get his effects.

"I am going home to live with them," he told Mrs. Miller.

Luder was greatly excited over the prospect. He had been despondent for a long time before. In the midst of his talk with Mrs. Miller he suddenly fell over in a faint. He died before a doctor arrived.

WANTED TO KISS ALL THE TIME, HIS WIFE SAID

Wouldn't Work a Stroke and Threatened to Kill Her If She Left Him.

Wouldn't Work a Stroke and Threatened to Kill Her If She Left Him.

William Brenner, Jr., tall, blond and handsome as a Laura Jean Libbey hero, came to town a month ago from Kingston and invaded the Great White Way. In a barber shop he espied pretty Mary Etta, the heroine of our story, also tall, blonde and Gibsonesque. In an instant they were holding hands across a manicurist's table. A taxicab whirled them to the altar of Cupid, where they were tied in a knot. Would they live happily forever afterward? No, dear reader, they would not, but more anon.

Two days passed by. William was missed from Kingston. And the smiling face of pretty Mary was doubly missed from the Broadway barber shop. But on the third day Mary returned, minus her smile, a sadder and wiser woman.

"Give me back my job," she said to the boss. "No more romance for mine."

Love at First Sight. In the West Side court to-day the last chapter was told. William was arraigned, charged with attempting to kill his two-day wife. The pretty manicurist told her story to Magistrate Herman. Here it is:

"I was working in the Broadway shop and happy. I lived in Brooklyn. Then he came. He sat down to have his nails fixed, and talked to me so persuasively I consented to go to the theatre with him. Yes, it was a case of love at the first sight. I could not refuse to marry him, he was so nice and handsome."

"We went to live in a furnished room and the future looked rosy to us. It was a six dollar room, and my first suspicion was aroused when William kicked at the price. He thought we ought to get a fine place to live for three."

"For two days we lived there. He never went out to work and I avoided him. He said he couldn't bear to leave me. He wanted to hug and kiss me all the time. Finally I decided to slip out and go home. The next day I came back at my old job."

"But I could not lose William. He came and met me every night when I was through work. He wanted me to return to him, but I refused. One night he followed me home and threatened to kill me. My mother ran out, and after a tussle took the revolver away from him. I am afraid of him."

Penitent in Court. William was served with the summons to appear in court yesterday. His wife pointed him out to a policeman. He was very penitent.

"Let me go and I will annoy her," he said to the Magistrate. "Judge Albert B. Parker is going to get a divorce for me. He was my father's law partner at Kingston."

The Magistrate consented to let Brenner go, but warned him to keep away from his wife. At Judge Parker's office to-day it was said that Judge Parker knew young Brenner, but that he had never been his father's law partner.

TAX BOOKS OPEN; GET READY TO SWEAR 'EM OFF

Increase of $472,000,000 in Assessed Value of the City's Real Estate.

Tax Books Open; Get Ready to Swear 'Em Off

Increase of $472,000,000 in Assessed Value of the City's Real Estate.

The tax books were opened to-day. All persons who have been speculatively assessed on realty and personally must now appear before the Tax Commissioners and swear off any of their assessments that are deemed excessive. They will have to "show" the Commissioners this year, for President Purdy has said that the figures of former years must be increased, that tax-dodging must be detected and delinquents compelled to pay up.

The lists as scrutinized to-day show that none of the millionaires nor multimillionaires have escaped the tax assessor. The real estate of the Vanderbilts is assessed at $14,000,000. It is estimated that the assessed value of city property acquired during the year, the total increase in the assessed value of ordinary real estate, exclusive of special franchises and real estate of corporations expressed in millions is as follows:

Manhattan $10,000,000
Bronx 4,000,000
Richmond 14,000,000
Total $28,000,000

Valuation of Realty. The assessed value of real estate for 1907, exclusive of the real estate of corporations and special franchises, was $2,700,000,000. The real estate of corporations was assessed at $600,000,000. It will be about the same this year, and the special franchises $460,000,000. This totals $3,760,000,000.

The personal assessments have not been tallied for this year. The personal assessment of the Vanderbilts is as follows:
Alfred G. Vanderbilt $200,000
Alfred G. Vanderbilt 100,000
Cornelius Vanderbilt 100,000
George W. Vanderbilt 20,000
George W. Vanderbilt 20,000
William K. Vanderbilt 1,000,000
Total Vanderbilt assessment $3,810,000

Assessment of Estates. The assessments on some of the larger estates are as follows:
William A. Brewster $3,000,000
Charles T. Barney 1,000,000

Other Assessments. Here are some of the other personal assessments:
John Jacob Astor 200,000
Charles F. Murphy 50,000
John D. Rockefeller 2,500,000
John D. Rockefeller 2,500,000
George J. Gould (non-resident) 100,000

INSURANCE MAN DEAD. William Marshall's Body Found in His Room.

William Marshall, sixty years old, an insurance agent, was today found dead in his room, at No. 438 West Forty-third street. The man had been about the house yesterday and during the evening. He was heard by fellow lodgers in the house during the night, and seemed to be moving.

The coroner was notified, but the police say death apparently was from natural causes. A postal card wishing a happy New Year and Merry Christmas was to "Dear Pop" and signed "Will." It is presumed that he has a son at No. 44 Sixth street, N. W., Washington, D. C., from which address the card was mailed.

TSCHAKOWSKY'S CASE. ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 13.—Although Nicholas Tschakowsky, representative of the Russian Revolutionaries, was arrested more than a month ago, no report of it has been made to the Ministry of Justice, as required by law. It is presumed that Tschakowsky is held by Premier Stolypin's order.

The government hopes through him to strike a telling blow to the Russian revolutionary campaign in America.
